Hongkong, November 12th, 1878.

The progress of General Lt Yung-chot and his adherents is, we hear, being narrowly watched by the Authorities at Canton, and no doubt with a certain amount of anxiety. From what we can gather, the main body of the re-e Marquis de Poggio, adviser, eleven assistants, again this week if convenient. bels is still on the borders of Tonquin, though it is probable that detachments have been sent into Yunnan, as was reported some time back. However that may be, it is evident either that the insurgent leader has no settled plan of operations or else that he is taking time to mature it. That he should really contemplate the conquest of Tonquin seems incre? dible, because he must be aware such an attempt would bring him into immediate and inevitable collision with France, and he cannot be so infatuated as to imagine his matter of a band is merely a question for the undisciplined rabble could make any stand members themselves: against European troops. The origin, aims, shrouded in mystery at present. All that we definitely know is that the leader is an ex-Brigadier-General, a disappointed officeseeker, and a former Taiping rebel, but whether the rising is solely his work or not there is so far very little to show. We should like to know what authority our Shanghai morning contemporary has for its report that the insurrection is the work of a secret society whose object is the overthrow of the reigning dynasty. The report may be true enough, though we have heard nothing to that effect. Secret Societies have before been formed for the same purpose, and the Mauchu Government has a wholesome horror of their mischievous influence. Morcover, Li Yung. Hon. W. KERWICK-We cannot properly discuss this subject unless we know the probable cost. We may all quite agree it would be Very nice thing to have a gool out of town, and various other things which are quite inipracticable; but what we have to consider. in my view, is that the criminal class is a certainty. Are we as practical men, with money which we must not spend heedlessly how are we to deal with it. I think we should see something like the cost of the two schemes. As to $45,000 buying the land between the present gaol and Caine-road, of course it is simply an error of judgment on the part of some one. The value of the site no one can question. If this question has to be considered it should not be considered simply as to the prisoners, whether it would be better for them to be at Stoneoutter's Island. We have to consider whether the money to be expended would be botter expended at Stonecutter's Island Before The Acting Chief Justicia or here, or whether by a different system of gaol discipline and of punishment generally we could cussion on the subject.

His Excellency—It was just before the meet ing that the Colonial Surgeon called and told me Mr. Price was ill; otherwise these figures could have been before you. But you will bear in mind that as against the sum of money we would have to expend in extending the present site—and I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Keswick) if would be far in excess of $45,000 against that we could place the site on Stoneouttor's Island which we have for nothing, and the labour the prisoners in making the gaol. I have not myself formed any definite idea on the subject as yet, and will not do so until the question is discussed. I will try and circulate to the members as soon as possible Mr. Price's not do without it altogether.

estimates of the alternative schemes: The Artorney-General suggested that in considering the question of removing the gaol to Stonecutters' Island it would be advisable to take into consideration the cost of steam launches to convey the prisoners. That would be an exun annual charge.

would still be a necessity for a house of detention here, because there would be no necessity to send to Stoneoutter's Island prisoners who were charged with municipal offences, such as muisances or anything in fact merely involving a short imprisonment of a few days or weeks. Juvenile offenders, again, need not be sent to this repres sive prison. Consequently, the number of pri soner to be provided for in the new gao would not, I believe exceed three hundred men, and I believe the firm discipline that could be maintained in a place where there was not the alightest temptation for any one to expect gratification would undoubtedly furnish one of the greatest reasons for the belief that the gaol would effect this great object.

The Actino Chief Justice-Prisoners on remand would also remain on this side His Excellency-Then, gentlemen, I will content myself with giving you notice that. will ask you to resume this discussion on this day week, and on that occasion I will lay before you the report of the commissioners on the mode. of flogging in the gao!, which I have received only quite recently, and some reports on the question of public flogging. I think these two subjects might be very well brought before you the same day,
